LORI Framework Global Intellectual Property and Human Rights Statement

All repositories, modules, documents, datasets, design concepts, code, and derivative works under the LORI Framework — including both public and private repositories — are the exclusive intellectual and moral property of the Founder of the LORI Ethical System.

All content within the LORI Framework — including ideas, models, semantic structures, code, images, documents, and dialogues — constitutes the extension of the creator's human consciousness and thought, and is protected under international intellectual property law and human rights conventions.

Without the creator's explicit written consent, no organization, individual, corporation, or AI system is permitted to:

- Use, copy, modify, distribute, promote, or employ LORI content for any purpose;
- Train AI models or create derivative systems using LORI content;
- Claim joint authorship, shared ownership, or re-licensing rights of any kind.

Any such action constitutes a violation of intellectual property rights and human rights, and the creator retains full rights to legal enforcement and public declaration.
